Kim Barrie

Strategize Your Communication—Revive Your Motivation

- Do you find some people are annoying to work with? Do you ever feel as though others do not appreciate you at work? Do you find you just can't communicate with some personalities? If you answered "yes" to any of these questions, you're not alone. Most of us have experienced what it's like to work with people that are a drain on our energy, and sometimes, on our motivation to "show up".
- Gain strategies to tap into the energy and motivation of others, develop meaningful, productive, working relationships that revive your motivation and enthusiasm

A lifelong learner, Kim is committed to sharing her experiences, learning's and musings on all things behavioural to help people on their quest for more meaningful and satisfying experiences at work.

Tony Johnson

The Human factor behind Incident investigations

..."This is the way we've always do it!" ... "Just teach them to lift properly"
Influencing change following an incident can be challenging. Furthermore, the investigation process can be influenced by many factors such as bias, personal beliefs and most commonly, blame.

This interactive workshop explores incident analysis methodologies and the use of tools such as the Human Factors Analysis Classification System (HFACS) to assist in problem solving and decision making as applied to incidents involving the moving and handling of people.

A Physiotherapist, Tony Johnston has been involved in the Healthcare Ergonomics and Patient Handling for over 15 years and has played a leading role in shaping the direction of patient handling within Queensland.

Workshops

New and innovative equipment
sourced just for you

Round robin workshops on "new and innovative"
equipment,

Workshops designed to allow for more than just looking at a new piece of equipment. Trouble shooting and giving feedback to the designers and suppliers is paramount in achieving a win - win for all concerned – this style of workshoping in small groups, will facilitate lasting understanding and networks with likeminded persons as well as allow you time to actually put equipment through its hoops.

We promise a full day
